

A Nursing Home May Not Be Your Only Option.

The Ocean State Center for Independent Living (OSCIL), a non-residential, non-profit organization, can help seniors and adults with disabilities who are interested in transitioning from nursing facilities back into the community, either moving back to their own home or apartment or to the home of a relative or friend.

OSCIL's Community Living Option Program has been assisting people with disabilities to move from a nursing home setting to a less restrictive environment for many years. OSCIL staff is able to work with each individual to identify their specific needs, assist in the housing search, establish community connections, and obtain support services – all necessary for a safe and sustainable transition.

For more information on eligibility requirements and to find out if the community living an option for people with disabilities is right for you or someone you know, please reach out to us to learn how we may be able to help.

 (401) 738-1013

 www.oscil.org

 info@oscil.org

 1944 Warwick Ave., Warwick, RI & 175 Main Street, Pawtucket, RI

*Please note that participating individuals must be medically stable and self-directed. OSCIL is unable to take referrals for individuals who sign out against medical advice (AMA).